Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: The applicant's argument regarding the gain factor has been considered, the examiner respectively because in a unified display with color contribution from the RGB color channel where the gain is applied on the picture as a whole, the color channel having greater weight will have a processed gain factor equivalent to its own weight value in the channel, which means that the gain factor would have a greater effect on the singular color having greater presence in terms of brightness because the linear sharpening would disproportionately affect that color, therefore the prior art Hunter and Brett when taken as a whole teaches the limitation of the independent claim 1.
